THE

South-Carolina GAZETTE.

From Thursday June 12th, to Thursday, June 19th, 1755.

O Tempora! O Mores!

AS Man, by the Frailty of his own Nature and many Causes from without, is subject to Diseases, those who professed the Art of Healing, have been held in the highest Esteem from all Antiquity, and are every where in the Holy Scriptures recorded with Honour. In these we find likewise, that it was a Custom in the earliest Ages to reward their Services, in Proportion to the Abilities of those who stood in Need of their Assistance; for, the King of Syria ordered a vast Sum for Elisha when he sent to consult him for the Cure of Naaman's Leprosy, which the Prophet would not receive, as the Skill was conferred on him with other Divine Gifts, when a double Portion of Elijah's Spirit was granted him; and for the same Reason our blessed Saviour, when he endowed his Apostles with a Power to heal the Sick and Lame, as the greatest temporal Blessing they could bestow on Mankind next to the Knowledge of Himself, commanded them, freely to give what they had freely received, and that they should not accept Fee or Reward, as was the Practice of Physicians at that Time, which he does not censure them for doing, as he would surely have done, if there had been any Thing sinful or unjust in it. Those Instances, both prove the Antiquity and Legality of this Custom, which still prevails in most Parts of Europe and many Places in America; but in this Town it is a new Thing, and resented highly, for no other Reason but because it is so. However, the Gentlemen of that Profession, have just Cause to complain, that the Practice, fatiguing as it certainly must be in this scorching Climate, is made much more laborious, by their being thought obliged to so many Calls, which the Condition of the Sick does not make necessary, or, it may be, only to answer some frivolous Question, or perhaps to ask his Advice how to apply a Medicine which they have in the House, from which no Advantage can arise to themselves. Is it not high Time to remedy this kind of Servility, by [illegible] it is very plain [illegible] to be paid for Medicines is no Equivalent for such Fatigue, and the Hazard they run of their own Health, to recover ours. When our Heads ach, our Tongues are parched, and the whole Frame is disconcerted by the raging Symptoms of a violent Fever; or, when our little Infants are struggling, and as it were torn in Pieces, with Convulsions; do we not then look with Joy on those very Men (who are now reproached with the worst Names in private Conversation and in public News-Papers) and esteem them as Sheet-Anchors by which we hope to weather this Storm which threatens us with Ship-wreck? Are they not requested by our anxious Relations, to spare no Pains, intreated to call often and to use double Diligence, to save our Lives at the Risque of their own? Is not this a Truth, my Fellow-Citizens, which we have but too frequent Opportunities of experiencing in our own Families? But if you should ask those Gentlemen, whether this extraordinary Trouble and Attendance is properly acknowledged, they are ready to answer, very rarely; but instead of that, for the most part, the Price of their Medicines is found Fault with, and every Thing is too much, now that the Danger is over.

Is it not long ago, that we were ready to acknowledge the Practitioners here to have been diligent in their Attendance, of sufficient Abilities, and great Experience by their long standing amongst us? And if such have complained, it will never be imagined they did so without very good Reasons, so that there is Room to doubt, the late Indecency offered them, will give very little Encouragement to any Men of Character to settle in this Place; and should such a Person introduce himself, he will, for some Time, be as much at a Loss how to treat our Constitutions, as He would be who has his Business to learn again.

I have inquired of some of the Gentlemen concerning the Extent of their new Regulation, which their Advertisement did not well express nor sufficiently explain, of which when they had informed me with their Motives for so doing, there seems nothing new nor extraordinary in it: And as they are satisfied with the Justice of the Thing, they have no [illegible] either to answer any Scurrility which may be published against them, or to give any other than a verbal Explication of their Meaning to those who may have Curiosity enough to inquire concerning it. But it is a Pity they should not be vindicated from [illegible] gross Imputations, [illegible] may conceive them; It is but just to a Set of the most useful Men to Society, to state their Intentions fairly, which will necessarily lead me to speak a Word to my Fellow Freeholder.

If then they propose to attend the same poor Families which are in this Place, with the same Diligence as formerly, the Want of Charity, with which they are charged, is wrongfully imputed to them.

If they attend Negroes on the old Footing, except when called to advise how to apply our own Medicines, and if they expect no Fees from Persons of inferior Fortunes, who yet can pay for their Drugs, can this be call'd Inhumanity? But if they expect to receive a small Gratuity, by Way of Recompence, for their Trouble in attending those whose Fortunes enable them to bear this Expence, is this to be termed Injustice? No, it cannot, for it is not making the Rich pay for the Poor, but only what is reasonable if all could afford it, when extraordinary Attendance is given.

And if this can be judged Inhumanity in the Practitioner, What shall we say of those, who to save a Fee to a Man of Experience, will put the Lives of their Relations or valuable Negroes in Competition with a little Money, and [illegible] with them at Home, because they have been told by some good old Woman or Nurse, that such a Thing is proper for this or the other Complaint, when at the same Time they are wholly ignorant of the Disease? And if it is true, that there is only One rational Method of curing an acute Distemper, how many Chances to One are there against the Life of such a Patient? For my own Part, I shall never enter on this kind of Family-Oeconomy at the Peril of my Conscience; for should the Person miscarry by the Disease which I had attempted to relieve him from unskilfully, Qu. Whether I have not been accessary to his Death?

By the Freeholder's Equation, that the Price of Medicines has not fallen since the Peace, it would seem full Time for him to discharge his Bill, for had he done so, he might have been convinced, he was wrong. His Sneer on the Practice, by the little Story, is unfairly told, for the Conclusion was, "That "the Physician, who was a Man of Humour, and "knew the hypochondriacal Man's Foible, effectually cured him with a few Pills, made of Crumb "of Bread." But his Quotation from Doct. Garth is so invidiously mangled, either by adding to, or striking out the Author's Words, to apply it to Charles-Town at any Rate, that it is no longer Poetry, but Prose run mad. However as it carries such a horrid Picture of Mortality with it as must discourage Strangers from venturing amongst us, I will try Two Ways (allowed to come near the Truth in other Countries) to discover the Number of Inhabitants here, and then compare this with the Burials.

If each of our Foot Companies musters 100 Men, and there are besides, 100 Alarm-Men and Troopers, then the Number fit to bear Arms in this Town will be 600; And if every Eighth Person is supposed fit to carry Arms, the Number of our Inhabitants will be 4,800. The other Method is, to take the Number of Houses, which, from a List taken by the Inquirers, is about 737, to each of which if we give Six Persons (altho' in other Places Seven or more are allowed) by this Way the Number of our People will be 4422. But, lest neither of these may be right by itself, let us add them together, and take the Half of the Amount, which will be 4,611.

In the large Parish of St. Philip and all other Grounds [illegible] by Mr. [illegible] Bills of Mortality for the Years 1752 and 1753 (the latter of which was remarkable for the Death of many [illegible]) there were buried in both Years 274, including Coloureds and Still-born; the Half of which for One Year is 137: So that of 4,611 People, there die 137 annually, which is somewhat less than One in Thirty-four, of whom many are Strangers and Children under One Year old: A moderate Proportion this, and such as will bear a Comparison with Mortality in other more temperate Climates; and helps to shew, notwithstanding the extreme Heats to which we are exposed, the natural Weakness of our Constitutions, and the many acute Diseases to which we are subject, that the Physicians do not practise without Success.
